I don't know why they all seem to do this, but it seems to be standard practice in several different states and different shops too.

It is also not certain if screening accurately identifies children at risk for heart disease.

Once you know your preferred direction, you will need to research the various careers within the field you have chosen.